

Effective management of operating rooms with core from Richard Wolf

With the core OR solution, Richard Wolf - one of the great innovators in minimally invasive surgery - integrates a variety of technologies in the OR of the future.

Coordinating the workflow is much easier with the central device management that can be controlled and monitored either by touch screen or voice.

The patient-related documentation required for the intervention is available from the image archive and data management and, when necessary, integrated video management allows colleagues to be consulted using video conferencing.

This communications option is also very useful for basic teaching and advanced training.

The integrated OR solution core stands for improved ergonomics and greater efficiency both within and beyond the OR.
